The Koh-i-Núr (Lahore), of the 3rd February, publishes a communication, dated 22nd January, Afghan affairs. from an Afghan at Kabul. The communication is written in Persian and is headed "Afghan affairs, No. I." The writer states that the detachment sent by the Amir against the Badshah of Kuner has suffered a defeat, and, consequently, reinforcements have been despatched from Kabul. The rebels are flocking in large numbers round the banner of the chief of Kuner. During the last two and a half years which have elapsed since his accession to the throne, Abdu-l-Rahman Khan has treated all classes of the people with great severity and made them all his inveterate enemies by his tyranny and oppression. He maintains an appearnce of friendship both with British and Russian Governments, and fancies that both of them are desirous of his aid. He even labours under the hallucination that the British Government owes him a deep debt of gratitude. Two causes have chiefly tended to fill his mind with an undue idea of self-importance: -(1) When he crossed the Amu, he did not even dream of acquiring the Amirship of Afghan-In fact, he would have been perfectly satisfied if the British Government had ceded to him any district of Turkistan. When British officers invited him to Kabul and offered him the Amirship, he would not come. In the first place, he feared the natives of Kahul, because he knew that they had been exposed to great tyranny at the hands of his father, nephew, and himself during the thirteen months that their reigns had lasted. Secondly, he was afraid that British officers might imprison or assassinate him. Thirdly, he imagined that, if the British Government placed him on the throne, he would have to give hostages and to pay a large annual tribute. It was with great difficulty that he was prevailed upon to come to Kabul. He had a very high idea of the power of the British Government, and would have acceded to any terms that British officers would have imposed on him. But it is to be regretted that they treated him in a way that has greatly lowered British prestige in his eyes and puffed him up with pride. They bestowed the sovereignty of Kabul on him without demanding any terms, and made valuable presents to him. In fact, they even led him to imagine that they would esteem it a great favour if he allowed the British army to return to India in safety. After the withdrawal of British troops from Kabul he was accustomed to declare in open darbar that he had conferred a great favour on the British Government in allowing its army to return to India, and that the money and war ammunition given to him by it were a sort of tribute. He even went so far as to say that he was not at first aware that the British Government was so weak, otherwise he would have detained the British army at Kabul and demanded the cession of the Panjáb. (2) After his accession to the throne the wiseacres of Kabul told him that Sher Ali Khan had committed a great mistake in refusing to receive a British envoy. He should have maintained an air of friendship towards the British Government, obtained large sums of money from it, and even endeavoured to obtain the cession of Peshawar and Panjab in return for his friendship. At the same time he should have secretly intrigued with Russia, instigated war between the two powers, and ultimately thrown in his lot with the victor. But he rejected this policy, although it had been proposed to him. Abdul Rahman Khán, however, has accepted the advice of the wiseacres of Kabul and has been pursuing this policy since his arrival there. He has outwardly severed all connection with Russia, which supported him for no less than thirteen years, and assumed an attitude of friendship towards the British Government. The British envoy at Kabul is kept under surveillance. The Amir has sent his envoy to India in order to ascertain the views of the British Government, and then to communicate them to his old friends, the Russian Government. | There is no doubt that he is a secret enemy of the British Government It will be remembered that at the darbar, held at Sherpur, at which Abdul Rahman Khán was declared to be the Amir of Kabul, the British officers told all Afghan sardárs, who were present on the occasion, that he would always endeavour to promote their welfare, and especially assured those persons who had evinced friendship towards the British Government that they would receive good treatment at his hands. But they have been treated with great severity. He has alienated all his subjects, and the Government can expect no help from him. The bestowal of the kingdom of Afghanistan on him was a mistake, and all the aid that the Government has hitherto given to him in the shape of money and ammunition has been simply thrown away. The Government should have placed such a man on the throne as would have won the good-will of all Afghan tribes in order that they might be ready to encounter the Russian army in the event of a Russian invasion. Abdul Rahman Khan has killed many persons and confiscated their property. The people have been · induced to think that all these executions and confiscations have been made under the orders of the British Government, and therefore they do not now cherish the same friendly feeling towards it as before. Under these circumstances, it behoves it to take a lesson from its past mistakes and to adopt a better policy in future.

But the Government should not allow itself to be deceived by this display of friendship on his part. He has long lived on Russian money, and is sure to espouse the cause of Russia in the event of war. The British Government should always carefully watch her intrigues. The Delhi Punch also contains a picture in which the Amir

The Kavivachan Sudha (Benares), of the 22nd January, states that it would seem that the The proposed reduction of the armies of native Army Commission has recommended the reduction of the armies of native states. But it is to be hoped that the Government will never accept the proposal. It is fully acquainted with the loyalty of the native chiefs. They are always ready to assist it in an emergency. They offered the services of their troops for service in Afghanistan and Egypt. (The Sajjankirti Sudhakar (Udaipur), of the 29th January, also protests against the proposed reduction of the armies of native chiefs, and urges that the Government should adopt measures to improve them).

GENERAL ADMINISTRATION.

A correspondent of the Victoria Paper (Sialkot), of the The appointment of 1st February, complains that some Honorary Magistrates. Honorary Magistrates are amenable to bribery and abuse their powers, and urges that criminal powers should be withdrawn from such men after/two years. It is unwise that they should be allowed to hold the office for life. The editor argues that it would be difficult for Government to distinguish between good and bad men, and that therefore the best plan would be to appoint Honorary Magistrates, like Municipal Commissioners, with the consent of the people, and also to fix the term of office.

The Nydya Sudhá (Harda), of the 7th February, states that English education developes the mental and moral faculties of students; but as physical training is neglected at Indian schools and colleges, the students generally become very weak by hard study. Satisfactory arrangements should be made for physical training. High education should be made as cheap as possible in order to bring it within the reach of poorer classes. It should be observed that education cannot become general in this country until it is imparted in the vernacular. True, the vernacular language is still in its infancy, but it should be improved and enriched by publishing vernacular translations of good English scientific books.

A correspondent of the Oudh Akhbar (Lucknow), of the 2nd February, highly praises the Vice-delivered at the Calcutta roy's speech delivered at the Calcutta Madrasah.

importance of acquiring education, and declared that every man was to be judged by his intellectual ability and moral character, and not by his race or religion. Those persons, who plume themselves on their race or high birth, and are indifferent to education, cannot study this sentence too carefully. The Viceroy justly praised the Maharaja of Darbhanga for giving aid to the Madrasah, which is a Muhammadan institution.

The Koh-i-Ner (Lahore) has an article on the decline of native art in its issues of the 24th and The decline of native industries. 31st January. The editor states that the spread of English education and civilization among the natives has created a love for articles of European manufacture in their minds. As there is no demand for native manufactures, native industries have declined, and native artizans have abandoned their old trades and taken to agriculture and other callings to earn a livelihood. The Panjab Government established an industrial school, called the Mayo School of Arts, at Lahore some years ago, to revive and encourage old native industries. But it should be observed that, in the first place, the revival of old native industries is hopeless and use-The tastes of the people have changed, and therefore new industries should be created to provide for their wants. Secondly, the Panjab Government does not maintain the Mayo School of Arts in an efficient condition. The school has turned out no large number of students. We do not know of any students having set up in successful trades after leaving the school. No doubt one or two of them have obtained empleyment on Rs. 30 or Rs. 40 a month in distant parts of the country. Mr. Kipling, the principal of the school, is andoubtedly a wary able men, but what "the sinews of war"? The aid given by the Government to the school is small. The editor will in a future issue refer to the measures which, in his opinion, are measure for the aproxement of native industries.

The same paper, of the 31st January, thanks the Penjab Delay in the supply of Government for the supply of official official news to the verna-cular press from the Pannews to the editors of vernacular newspapers, but complains that there is jáb Secretariat. generally some delay in the supply. An account of the Lieutenant-Governor's late visit to Delhi on the 17th January appeared in the Civil and Military Gazette of the 20th idem, and a verbacular translation of the news from that paper was published in the Koh-i-Nér of the 24th idem. We received the news from the Panjáb Secretariat after we had published it in this way. Arrangements should be made for the supply of news to the editors of English and vernacular papers simultaneously. (The Aftáb-i-Panjáb (Lahore), of the 5th February, also draws the attention of the Panjáb Governmen to the delay in the supply of news to the vernacular press.)

The Hindustani (a new vernacular paper recently started at Lucknow), of the 1st February, Collisions between villagers and shooting parties publishes an article communicated by of European soldiers. a correspondent from Meerut. writer, referring to the unfortunate collisions that frequently take place between villagers and shooting parties of European soliders, remarks that, when a villager is killed by a European soldier, the death of the deceased is ascribed to a rupture of the spleen, or the assault is held to have been committed under provocation, and the accused is acquitted or sentenced to a small fine or a short term of imprisonment. But when a European soldier kills a man of his own race, no such pretext saves him from condign punishment. The fact of the matter is that the life of a native is considered to be of no value. Cannot Lord Ripon, who has introduced the local self-government scheme and conferred other benefits on natives, pass a law for the protection of their lives against European soldiers? If he did so, his memory would be always cherished with love and gratitude by them.

The Shokh-i-Oudh (Lucknow), of the 1st February, Lord Lytton's Indian states :- Lord Lytton is writing a administration. biography of his father. It would have been better if he had written an autobiography, in which he might have particularly given an account of his Indian administration. He held the Imperial Assemblage at Delhi, and unnecessarily spent lakhs of rupees on it. He waged an unnecessary and unsuccessful war against Afghanistan and gagged the vernacular press. The country was visited by a severe famine in his time. Sir George Couper was Lieutenant-Governor of the North-Western Provinces and Oudh at the time. He could make no satisfactory arrangements for the relief of famine. Although he spent a great deal of money on relief measures, thousands of men perished from starvation. Even during the famine Lord Lytton ordered the land revenue to be realized as usual. Natives will never forget his happy administration!

The same paper complains of the alleged ill-treatment of natives by Europeans. A native goes The ill-treatment of natives by Europeans. to see a Deputy Commissioner, but the latter drives him out of his premises with blows. Another makes water near the house of a European and is at once shot by the latter. Another is run over by the carriage of a European clergyman, and the latter escapes with a fine of Rs. 200. The recognition of a distinction of creed or colour does not become a civilized Government like the British Government. Natives are a very loyal people. Look at the services rendered by the native troops during the late Afghan and Egyptian wars. Natives are really deserving of a better treatment at the hands of their rulers, especially now that Her Majesty has assumed the title of Empress of India. quite useless, so far as the repression of crime is concerned, but also secretly oppress the people in a variety of ways. Theft and gambling are as prevalent as ever. Persons of bad character do not at all fear the police. When a theft is committed at the house of any man, and the police go to make enquiries, he has to feed them so long as the enquiries last. In fact, their object is to wrest from him all that the thieves have left. They also greatly oppress his neighbours. If they succeed in extorting a confession of guilt from any person by force, they are considered able officials and receive promotion. Moreover, the police officials are always very anxious to conceal crime. The editor then refers to the Bijnor police torture case which has recently been decided by the Allahabad High Court. In 1881 the dead body of a boy was found in a sugarcane field in Bijnor. In order to find out the culprit the police first beat all the villagers with shoes. At last their suspicions fell on some men of the Gadaria caste. They tortured the men and even dishonoured their women. One of the men died from the effects of the torture. The Magistrate committed the Police officials to the Sessions. At the Sessions the Police Inspector was acquitted, and the Sub-Inspector and other officials escaped with very small terms. of imprisonment. The case was retried at the High Court in January last. The Inspector was again acquitted, but the Sub-Inspector was sentenced to imprisonment for seven years, the head-constable and one constable for five years each, another constable for three years, and a chaukidar. for two years. This case clearly shows what tyranny and oppression are exercised by the police, and how difficult it is for Government to discover their illegal proceedings. It will be seen that Government did not become acquainted with the real facts of this case till after two The Police Department is filled with men who are either quite illiterate or have received only a vernacular education. At present, ignorant constables are gradually promoted to Sub-inapectorships and Inspectorships. If these posts were bestowed on graduates of the University, who are able-bodied and well acquainted with the law, the tone of the Department would be greatly improved. There is another reform necessary in this Department. The chaukidars are paid only Rs. 3-8-0 a month. Apparently this small pay is insufficient for their support and should be increased. When a police officer maintains a style of living beyond his means, the Government should at once infer that he extorts money from the people and make an enquiry into the matter.

The Anjuman-i-Panjáb (Lahore), of the 3rd February, states that it is a matter of great satisfac-Agricultural banks. tion that at last Government has directed its attention to the improvement of the miserable condition of the agricultural classes. The subject has been taken up none too soon. In fact, the evil done is in some measure past remedy. The high rates of interest charged by Mahájans (professional money-lenders) have reduced cultivators to a state of abject poverty. Although we cannot exonerate Government from all blame in the matter, it must be said in justice to it that it had no means of gaining an insight into their condition. It was obviously the duty of Deputy Commissioners to keep the Government informed of the state of things, but they took no interest in the matter at all. The Government is anxious to relieve them of civil and criminal work as much as possible, in order that they may be able to devote greater attention to revenue matters. it would seem that they do not understand the object of Government, and regard the relief granted to them as a matter of course. Some of them decide only one or two oriminal cases during the day, and pass the rest of their time in amusement. They are still as indifferent to revenue work ! These strictures are applicable to the district as ever. officers not only in the Panjab but also in other provinces. Acts were passed in 1871 and 1876 for the grant of advances to cultivators from the Government treasary for making improvements in land, but the Acts have proved utter failures owing to various causes. The editor here quotes a portion of Sir Steuart Bayley's speech delivered at the Viceroy's Legislative Council when the Hon'ble Mr. Crosthwaite asked for leave to introduce the Agricultural Loans Bill, in which he referred to the various causes which are generally believed to have operated in defeating the objects which Act XXVI. of 1871 had in view. The editor then proceeds to remark that provision has been made in section 4 of the Bill to authorize private persons or associations to make advances to cultivators for agricultural purposes. If agricultural banks are established, they will have to lend at a low rate of interest at which the Mahajan would find it impossible to lend, and the Government will have to give them greater facilities for the recovery of their loans than those possessed by him, otherwise they will not be able to drive him out of the field. As regards the recovery of advances, they will be recoverable like arrears of land revenue. But the advances will have to be made with the sanction of the Collector or Deputy Commissioner, and obviously the enquiries which he will make before according sanction will render the acquisition of a loan on the part of an applicant from an agricultural bank nearly as difficult as it is under existing rules from Government. Under these circumstances, in our opinion, the best policy would be to authorize only those banks, whose management is good and which have invested a portion of their capital in Government securities. to make advances to agricultural classes, to declare their - books subject to official inspection at the end of every year, to fix the rate of interest, and to give them full freedom in all other matters. The rate of interest may be fixed at 7 per cent. or 8 per cent. at the outside. The inspector should send a list of the loans, granted by a bank under section 4 of the Bill during the year, to the Collector of the district, and these loans should be realized like arrears of revenue. In case it is decided to fix the rate of interest at 8 per cent., the banks should pay one per cent out of that to Government as compensation for the loss of stamp and court-fee and the cost of inspection. There is no doubt that, if agricultural banks make advances at 6 or 7 per cent. interest, the Mahajans would be unable to compete with them, especially as they (the Mahajans) will have to submit to all the formalities and expenses of ordinary litigation in recovering their leans. We would make one more suggestion which would place the success of agricultural banks beyond question. A new section should be added in the Bill to the effect that no rights and interests in revenue-paying lands, which are liable for transfer for arrears of revenue and loans from agricultural banks, shall be liable for transfer for other loans. Such an enactment may at first sight seem very severe, but it has been accepted by the recent Irish land law and is in accordance with the modern notions of property. It is difficult to save ignorant cultivators from the machinations of Mahajans until some such law is passed. The editor here quotes an extract from pages 138 and 139 of Mr. Parker's book on jurisprudence, in which he referred to the advisability of making illegal the hypothecation or sale of revenue-paying land for debt.

The Rahbar-i-Hind (Lahore), of the 5th February, publishes an article communicated by Agricultural banks. one Sálig Rám, Honorary Magistrate, Jallandhar. In commenting on the question of the grant of loans to cultivators, the writer makes the following suggestions:—(1) When there is a failure of crops owing to drought or any other such cause, the revenue instalment should be suspended. (2) The Government should establish an agricultural bank in every district, having its branches at all the tabails in the district. The bank should lend money to cultivators, whose lands are hypothecated to Mahajans, in order to enable them to redeem the lands from the latter. The advances should be recovered by Government by periodical instalments with revenue. (3) The bank should make grain at market rates in payment of debts. (4) No stamp duty should be levied on such loans, but they should be certified by the sub-divisional officer or any respectable private individual, without any registration fee. (5) Just as the papers of patwaris are submitted every year, the bank should submit a list of advances, certified by the tahsildar. (6) An officer should be appointed in every district to settle all disputes between the bank and the cultivators without charging any fee.

If the Government made it a rule to make advances only on the security of land, the scheme would fail. If the Government is unwilling to lend, except on security of land, through fear of loss, it may authorize Mahajans to make advances to cultivators at 6 per cent. interest, and may itself lend money to them (Mahajans) at 3 per cent.

ring to the introduction in the Viceroy's Legislative Council of a Bill to amend the Code of Criminal Procedure as far as it related to the exercise of jurisdiction over European British subjects, remarks that there seems to be no reason why Native Magistrates should not be empowered to try Europeans. Some Anglo-Indian contemporaries contend that Native Magistrates are not qualified to try Europeans, but their assumption is quite gratuitous. Natives may with as much reason contend that Europeans are incompetent to decide their cases. The time has arrived when European and Native officers should be invested with equal powers.

of women in the Postal Department in that province. This measure is objectionable on several grounds. In the first place, the measure would benefit only European and Eurasian women and not native women. Education has made little progress among the latter, and they are accustomed to live behind the screen. Secondly, educated natives already suffer from want of employment, and their condition will become worse if European and Eurasian women are admitted to the public service. Thirdly, we would not object to the employment of women in the Postal Department, if it could be shown that they were better qualified for the work than men. On the contrary, it is well known that they are weaker than men, have to look after domestic affairs, and are subject to menstrual discharge, pregnancy, &c. Work can, however, be provided for them in some departments with advantage. They may be employed on railways in looking after the comforts of female passengers, in female schools, and dispensaries. They may be taught midwifery.

The Dabdaba-i-Qaisari (Bareilly), of the 3rd February, Some postal reforms publishes an article communicated by proposed for the consione Kámtá Prasád. The writer makes deration of the Directorthe following proposals for the consi-General of Post-office. deration of the postal authorities :- (1) An Urdu and Hindi translation of the Postal Guide should be published for the use of the natives who are not acquainted with English. The Postal Guide not only contains all the rules about the post-office, but there is also a complete list of post-offices attached to it. A vernacular translation of the book will be very useful to the native community. The information given in the Postal Abstract, already published in vernacular, is too meagre. (2) Some alterations are necessary in the rates of commission fixed for money-orders. Suppose a man has to remit Rs. 35. According to the present rates, if he obtains a money-order for the whole amount, he will have to pay eight annas as commission; but if he takes two moneyorders -one for Rs. 25 and the other for Rs. 10 - he will have to pay only 6 annas as commission. In order to avoid this anomaly, it is necessary that the present rates of commission for one hundred and factors of one hundred should be retained and the amounts in excess of those factors should be charged at the rate of one anna for every five rupees. (3) Moneyorder forms should be printed in all English, Urdu and Hindi characters, in order that those persons who do not know English may fill them in vernacular. If it is impracticable to print the forms in the three characters, the post office men should be ordered to fill them for senders gratis. Moreover, every delivery-peon should have always twenty-five forms with him in order that the people may be easily able to obtain them from him. (4) A small piece of paper, on which the rates of commission for money-orders and some other necessary postal rules are printed, should be attached to each cover that passes through the post-office, for the information of the public. Both Hindi and Urdu translations of the Postal Abstract should be also circulated in the interior of the country as widely as possible through village chaukidars. (5) "Exchange" copies of privileged newspapers are exempt from payment of postage. This privilege should be extended to copies of newspapers supplied by editors to correspondents and to the communications sent by the latter to (6) The system of prepayment of postage for the former. privileged newspapers is very complex and has been condemned by the whole vernacular press with one voice. The system of prepayment should be stopped and the restriction as to weight removed. All newspapers should be charged quarter anna postage irrespective of weight, and quarter anna postage stamps should be introduced for the purpose. (7) The system of the granting of certificates of posting by post-offices may be of some use to traders, but ordinary persons are only deceived by it. The people generally regard the certificate of posting as a sort of guarantee for the safe delivery of the letter to the addressee, and when any letter, for which such a certificate has been obtained at an additional cost of half an anna, does not reach its destinations they condemn the postal administration. The system of the issue of such certificates should be stopped, or the certificates should afford more security in regard to the transmission of letters. (8) Covers containing postage stamps are often lost in transmission through the post. Some arrangements should be made to check this evil. True, postal notes of small values have recently been introduced for small remittances, but these notes will never become very popular-first, because a commission is levied for these notes; and secondly, because the rules about these notes are very objectionable. (9) When a person desires to forward a post-card, which he has received from another person, to a third party, he must put it in a cover and affix a half anna postage stamp to the cover. It would be a good thing if it were ruled that such a post-card could be forwarded by tacking it with thread to a fresh post-card on which only the address should be written and nothing more.

The editor remarks that a similar story spread at Lahore about a month ago. The wars of the false prophet in the Soudan have given some colour of truth to such stories. The editor, who is a Musalman, asks his well-informed countrymen always to contradict such mischievous rumours most emphatically. If ignorant persons should ever come to believe in such rumours, they may bring about some great national disaster. True, a prophet is to be born according to the Muhammadan religion, but the signs, which are to precede his advent, have not yet appeared.
